

13, September 2014

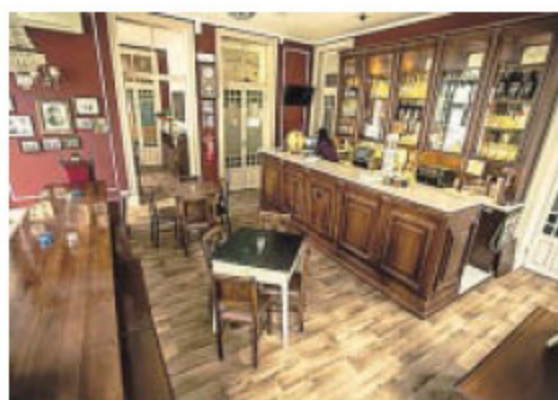

Five of the best Stylish hostels for autumn sunshine

Jack Sprat Shack, Treasure Bay, Jamaica

The wood-clad hostel, opening in late October, takes its name and look from Jack Sprat's restaurant (pictured), and will have 40 dorm beds and 12 twins/doubles. It is part of Jakes boutique hotel, and hostel guests will have access to most of the resort's facilities.

● Beds from $35 a night, jakeshotel.com

Home Hostel, Lisbon, Portugal

It's not hard to see why this has been voted one of the world's best hostels - central location in Baixa, hotel-like amenities including free breakfast and a lovely restaurant. Period features of the beautiful building chime well with the smartly renovated dorms.

● Beds from €14, homelishonhostel.com

We Hostel, São Paulo, Brazil
See the full list of 10 hostels on Monday at theguardian.com/travel

All mid-century furniture and minimalist monochrome styling, We looks like it's come straight from the pages of Wallpaper*, only with Lonely Planet prices. This mansion is among the leafy streets of the elegant Vila Mariana district.

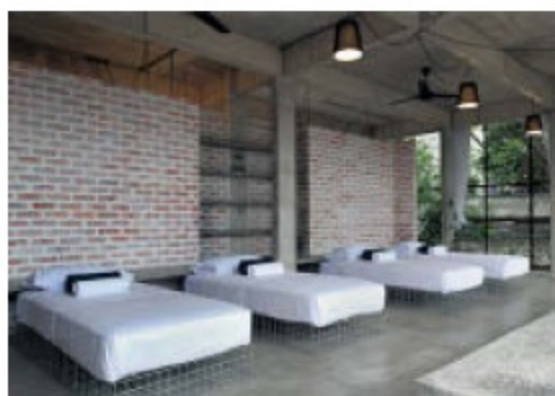

● Beds from £15, wehostel.com.br

Basecamp, Lake Tahoe, California

Sunny until October, Tahoe is an underrated spot for an autumn escape. Basecamp is a new hotel five minutes from the water with a summer-camp-meets-posh-hotel vibe, firepits, rooftop Jacuzzis and bedrooms for group of six or eight.

● 8 beds from $199, basecamp-hotels.com

Sekeping Kong Heng, Ipoh, Malaysia

Ipoh isn't the best-known Malaysian city, so this hostel comes as a surprise. There's an industrial theme in the three-floor building: glass boxes and sleeping areas are suspended amid rafters, wire framing and exposed plasterwork.

● Beds from around £40, sekeping.com
Emily Mathieson